Overview
The slogan of ‘Make in India’ has been coined to attract manufacturing industry for choosing India as a country to manufacture products. The government strives to present demographic pattern of the country as an opportunity to the industry by drawing the benefit from economic workforce. In order to translate the slogan into real action, there is a need to revisit regulatory framework dealing with industrial relations in the country. The regulatory framework dealing with the relationship between employer and employee has got a vital role in accomplishing the agenda of ‘Make in India’. There are scores of labour laws, central as well as state laws, enacted in this country, which touch upon industrial relations. Harmonious relationship between employer and employee is sine qua non not only for attaining productivity for the industry but also for achieving prosperity for the nation. In order to ensure the agenda of ‘Make in India’ a successful venture, the government at the centre as well as of the states have stressed on the realignment of legal provisions of industrial laws for facilitating smooth affairs in the industry. In the light of this, the course is proposed to fulfill following objectives:
